

The recent consolidation of media providers, radio, tv, and print, have resulted the suppression of free speech and the disappearance of an objective press presenting actual news, especially local news, to the public. Instead the public is now fed a sanitized conglomeration of crap designed to sell products and polarize people along national demographic lines. Please give us some rules mandating local control and content for the media. The preservation of real democracy, which relies on an informed and interested public at the local as well as national levels depends on this.
